The wheat is of very fine quality and the result is not only creditable to Mr. Bowen as a farmer, but is a profitable re-sult. Let's figure a little: 513 bushels of wheat at $1.15 per bushel, will amount in dollars and cents to $589,35, which for 16 acres would be an average of $36,874 cents to the acre. Such results for two successive years would pay for the land at $50 money to those who invest a quarter to see per scre, and leave money enough to pay it. ## OUR COLUMBUS LETTER.

Columbus, Outo, July 26, 1881. FRIEND TIMMONS:-Since my last the Capitol stands, as usual, quiet, and without any change in business, save the ordinary matters that pertain to all large cities, among country and city people. The Neil House, so long and favorably known among the "bon-tons," has passed away and is now numbered among past fashionable resorts for political purposes, where caucuses of manufactured candidates for office are made and thrust upon the honest voters of the State of Ohio to sup port, and who blindly believed they were not deceived. They are now tearing down the Neil House, and abandoning it for hotel purposes. The American House was the famous resort for the delegates of the Democratic Convention, and a more rollick ing crew never was gathered in Columbus B fore 7 o'clock in the morning many of them had their hides full of benzine, and if a canal mule could have heard them on Rhetoric, and interpreted their language he would have flopped his ears and brayed companions on so great an occasion. Saf fice it to say, a large portion of dead beat will deplete John W. Bookwalter's money bog during the campaign, then d--n th is sgain elected this fall. Democratic delegates were bought and sold, and were hung up in the market like hogs in a slaughter house, and if you could have seen the "blue ribbon brigade" of bummers from Logan county, and the "red ribbon suckers" of Springfield, labelled for Bookwalter, you would have fully concluded that from infancy they had refused milk and called for a bottle of whisky. The rosy tinge of their nose would dazzle in a sur beam, like jewels on the crown of the Oueen.

Nevin & Myers have a slice; Brand & Co., of the Volksblatt office have a chunk; the Journal has a portion, and the balance has gone up to Sandusky City, to take a Lake breeze, while those whose important births and lives have adorned the country with their brilliancy and democracy, have gone home to remain, it is hoped, forever, never to disgrace the halls of the Senate and Ir.

House of Representatives again by their pollution.

The dry and hot season so long endured in this city, causing so many deaths, has been refreshed and invigorated by copious rains, and everyone thanks a kind provi-dence for this blessing.

To the Editor of the JOURNAL, and the benevolent and enterprising readers of his paper, I extend my best wishes for their welfare. May their future be bright, and full of happiness, and as they glide down the stream of Time, may joy gladden their pathway, and when in the course of failing and fading names the loan will assign for and fading na nre, the hour will arrive for them to enter that vessei, while the boat-man pale shall dip his golden oars into the

God bless you little woman,
In the work you have to do.
And may his grace be with you,
And may he belp you through,
For we love you little woman,
With a heart so true and brave,
Who dare to be couraguous,
In the shadow of the grave.

God bless you, little woman,
With your heavy weight of care;
If our hearts could give assistance
Many millions would be there;
Our hearts are beating for you,
And responding to your own,
And beside your furshand's bedside
You are watching not alone.

For we are standing by you.
O'er the dear one lying low.
And we see the life-lamp flicker. and we see the life-ising flicker.
Swinging slowly to and fro:
And our hearts grow weak with angulah,
And our eyes grow wet with fears.
Till your presence, like an angel's,
Come to miligate our fears.

So keep up cheer, dear woman; Newer faiter till you're through, And God must surely belp you. For the whole world asks him to. You have won our love dear womar And a Nation's gratitude. For your noble self-devotion And heroic fortitude. God save you, little woman!
God save your husband, too!
God save you both unto us!
For we love both him an! you,
Stand by him little woman!
Stand firm, and brave and true!
And remember, little woman.

And recomber, little woman.
We will always stand by you.

The Temperance Question and the Press.

The time for a new departure has come. It is punctuated by the shifting and uncertain movement of those who have "had their own way " for many years, and who find themselves as far from the goal at which they aimed as they were when they started. The press independently must take this question in hand and educate the people to temperance. paper, every magazine, every review owes it to the country to teach this fact persistently. There has been something in the way in which the temperance reform has been pursued which has brought upon it the stigms of fanaticism. That stigms ought to be obliterated—so thoroughly obliterated that the man who weakly yields to a degrading appetite, or wantonly courts such an appetite, and the danger and disgrace it brings, shall feel that he bears a stigms which marks his degrada drinker, as well as those of stronger stomach and coarser tastes, must be made to teel that they are socially disgraced by their habits. In the family, everywhere, by all the ordinary means of approach to by all the ordinary means of approach to young and plastic minds, the virtue of temperance should be inculcated. It is fashionable for the young men to drink wine to day. It must not be to morrow; and in order that it may not be the seccepted leaders of public opinion must tell the people the truth, and enforce upon the people the obligations of duty.

The world of high life which sends down its powerful influence upon all the life beneath it never was influenced by professional temperance organizations, and is not likely to be. O Heaven! for one generation of clear and unpollisted men—men whose veins are not fed with fire; men fit to be companious of pure women; worthy to be the fathers of children; men who do not stumble upof children; men who do not stumble upon the rock of sponlexy at mid-age, or go shindly groping and staggering down into a drunkard's grave, but who can sit and function with eyes undimmed and hearts uncankered. Such a generation is possible in America; and to produce such a generation as this, the persistent, conscientions work of the public press is entirely competent as an irratrumentality.

One of the disastrous results of alcoholic drinking may be seen in the increasing percentage of insanity. In his annual reort for 1880, the Superintendent of the Maine Insane Hospital, referring to the use of alcoholic stimulants as "prolific source of insanity," says: "Could the use of alcohol, either as a luxury or medicine of alcohol, either as a luxury or medicine, be stricken from the land, many a room in our lunatic hospitals would be vacated, and many amilt to which flesh is heir deprived of its vitalizing power." He further adds: "In the animal economy alcohol is a monster, hydra-headed evil, spending its chief force upon the nervecenters, and deranging every part of the vast neurotic system. It should never be used in health and I am persuaded after.
